In a new Pew Research Center national survey conducted by the National Police Research Platform, majorities of police officers say that recent high-profile fatal encounters between black citizens and police officers have made their jobs riskier, aggravated tensions between police and blacks, and left many officers reluctant to fully carry out some of their duties. Reports Jan 17, Because these attacks occurred while the survey was in the field, it was possible to see if safety concerns of officers were affected by the incidents by comparing views before and after the assault.

Forexample, more than four-in-ten officers serving populations of more than 100,000 say they are less likely to use force. It conducts public opinion polling, demographic research, media content analysis and other empirical social science research. Police give their departments relatively positive, though not exemplary, ratings for training and equipping officers to do their jobs.

Urban police officers are defined as those whose department is within the census tract. The survey also finds that officers remain deeply skeptical of the protests that have followed deadly encounters between police and black citizens.
