When doing so, you leave the 3 rd and 7 th of each chord on the guitar, which are the two notes that pianists often use in their left hand when comping. In this section, you learn three A section and three B section licks that you can use in your playing when soloing over rhythm changes.

By using algorithms that are directly designed for the exercise set. This can be a welcomed change to your comping sounds, especially when playing with a bass player, who covers the root notes for you. It learns about your own playing and adapts to it forever so you will never have to ask what you should be practicing .

It is tough but is great for your internal sense of time. Learn What You Love Our primary focus is teaching students what they want to learn. Plus legato gives a different tone to actually plucking notes.
