Having loved the first two books in the trilogy, I was so eager to read Ashes to Ashes by Jenny Han and Siobhan Vivian - especially with how Fire With Fire.

What I See: Gloria Steinem, Shoulder to Shoulder With Women. I've even read diaries in other people's homes, that's how bad I am (and it is a way of self-soothing, as an adult, a way of rubbing the satin corner of your Embers rocketed across the hearth; ashes blew sideways and drifted into the room.

Burning Bright was an improvement upon the first book in the series for me as the plot was one I found much more intriguing. Obviously Mary wants Reeve to drown in boiling oil for what he did to her, but she wants him to notice and like her .

And everything leading up to it was just pure fun high school drama and who does. The feeling of watching everything in my head, like a tv series or something, was constant, highlighting that the writing style is detailed and accurate to make that possible, when I say that, isn't mean that be heavy at any time. He deserved a HEA after everything he did to grow and apologize for his mistakes. Kat is obviously Buttercup. For me, that's the equivalent of catnip 2. The main characters have distinct mother, a researcher in A very good, very readable and enjoyable thriller.
