Jon Lord's concerto for rock band. Larghetto G major 3. Like his violin concerto, it is symphonic in proportions. References The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians. For a Abertura e Toccata - Timpani in the late 18th century, Joseph Haydn and Thomas Arne wrote concertos which could be played interchangeably on both harpsichord, fortepiano and in some cases pipe organ. The concerto was intended as a composition typical of the Italian style of the time, and all the composers were studying how to compose in the Italian fashion all'italiana. Philip Glass has also written a concerto for harpsichord. Sometimes these works are played on the modern piano; see piano concerto. See also harpsichord concerto; some of these works are occasionally played on piano. Recitative elements are often incorporated, showing the influence of Italian opera on purely instrumental forms.
